

2020 COVID-19 INTELLECTUAL RIGHTS POLICY

Due to school closures, Studies Weekly is supporting teachers and students who need to continue their learning remotely. In response to various district requests, we have provided this policy granting temporary permission to and including, but not limited to, printed materials, audio, video, and online content. Educators may use Studies Weekly curriculum materials in online lessons and read-alouds under the following guidelines and conditions:

1. These permissions are only in effect for a limited time to support continued student learning during school closures. Online access to these video resources must be disabled, and any intellectual content stored outside of Studies Weekly be destroyed, by the end of this school year or no later than July 1, 2020, whichever comes first.
2. Each shared item, lesson, or reading must be presented “with permission from Studies Weekly” at the beginning of every video and end with “permission to record or duplicate this content is denied.”
3. Online videos of lessons and read-alouds should be delivered to your students through a closed platform that has restricted access. If you are unable to limit access, we prefer you to provide the content on your school or district site rather than more publicly available platforms, such as social media, YouTube, or public television.
4. Before posting such content, you must email support@studiesweekly.com with your name, state, city, district, and school and a brief description of the product(s) you are using and how it is being delivered online or a link to where it is posted.

By posting an online video of a lesson or read-aloud featuring Studies Weekly curriculum materials, you agree to abide by the terms and conditions above.