Speech & Thought Bubbles

Have you ever wondered what historical figures would say or think about when they read articles or stories about themselves? Perhaps they would add more information about themselves or make a comment about how things are in their world and time period. What if objects could talk? What would they share and say?

You will need a pair of scissors, a glue stick and a Studies Weekly newspaper. Add speech bubbles to the images you find in your Studies Weekly to show what the people or objects would have said, thought about, or felt.
