

American Monuments

See Primary Source Related Words... 1 • 10.03.17-18

TITLE

The Washington Monument honors George Washington. It is in Washington, D.C.

Monuments can be many things. They can be statues, fountains, or works of art. Many monuments honor the people and events that have helped make America a strong and free country.

American Monuments

A memorial helps us remember important people. All of these memorials are in Washington, D.C.

The Jefferson Memorial honors Thomas Jefferson. A large statue of Thomas Jefferson is inside the building.

The Lincoln Memorial honors Abraham Lincoln. You can see the Lincoln Memorial on the back of a five-dollar bill.

The Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial honors our 32nd president. He could not stand or walk without help, and he used a wheelchair for many years. Roosevelt was president for twelve years, longer than any other president. His dog, Fala, slept in his room every night.

These pictures are representations of monuments that grade-level students can identify. Please use them as a guide to determine which of your state's monuments are appropriate for your state's social studies standards. For more information, visit www.illustrationsforlearning.com. *The actual colors for the monuments are not shown. The actual colors for the monuments are not shown.

The Empire State Building is in New York City. It is more than 1,400 feet tall.

ITALICIZED OR BOLD FACED

ILLUSTRATION

Missouri. It is 630 feet tall. The Gateway Arch is a monument to the American pioneers who settled the West.

Most people like to be independent. That means they like to do things on their own. But everyone needs help sometimes. It is OK to ask for help when you need it.

HEADING

SUB-HEADING

CAPTION

ILLUSTRATION

PHOTO

CHART/GRAPH

TITLE

LABEL

ITALICIZED OR BOLD FACED